

Abstract

The present invention relates to an absorbent article, namely an absorbent article for feminine protection, having the property of being more flexible in use condition, thereby providing improved comfort to the wearer of the article, than before use, i.e., upon handling and positioning of the article on the undergarment of the wearer.